

Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 29 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Sunny spells and largely dry with a few scattered showers.

Today:

A mixture of sunny spells and scattered showers through the day, with showers becoming fewer and further between during the afternoon. Feeling cool and breezy. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:

Daytime showers soon clearing to leave a dry night, but becoming wet and windy through the small hours as a band of rain, heavy at times, moves into the region. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Thursday:

A wet and windy morning with rain, heavy at times, gradually clearing to the east. Winds ease for the afternoon but it will remain rather cloudy with a few showers. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

A mixture of sunshine and showers on Friday, then becoming more unsettled over the weekend with the risk of strong winds, heavy rain, and blustery showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.